

April 5, 2006

This company depends on taxpayers to pay for most of their workers' healthcare needs? Why should they get a charter for a bank when they CHOOSE NOT to provide healthcare for their workforce even though they're the largest corporation in history and make record-breaking profits?

It's ridiculous that people are even deciding to allow Wal-Mart to have a bank.

As more and more people become aware of the damage that this company has caused for small businesses in small and large towns alike, it is apparent that allowing a company like this to start a financial empire will have damning consequences for so many poor people and small businesses.

Kim Fortin